

Australian Government
Attorney-General's Department

PSPF Reforms

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

The Protective Security Policy Framework (PSPF) is mandatory for non-corporate Commonwealth entities and represents better practice for corporate Commonwealth entities and wholly-owned Commonwealth companies under the PGPA Act.

The new PSPF improves clarity, reduces unnecessary 'red tape' and fosters a strengthened security culture across government. The reforms to the PSPF do not fundamentally change entities' responsibilities to protect their people, information and assets.

WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT:

TIMING:

NEED FURTHER INFORMATION?

Contact your security area or the PSPF Team
in the Attorney-General's Department
email pspf@ag.gov.au
visit the PSPF website www.protectivesecurity.gov.au

KEY CHANGES

1 GOVERNANCE

Defined security leadership roles and responsibilities—new Chief Security Officer role to provide protective security oversight

Adopting a life cycle approach to security management

Reporting on the level of security maturity using the new PSPF maturity model

2 INFORMATION SECURITY

Increased prominence of cyber security matters and greater coherence with Australian Government Information Security Manual

Simplified security classification of information:

- UNCLASSIFIED replaced by new marking—OFFICIAL
- Dissemination Limiting Markers (Sensitive, Sensitive: Personal, Sensitive: Legal) replaced by a single marking—OFFICIAL: Sensitive
- CONFIDENTIAL classification discontinued
- New special handling caveat—CABINET — replaces Sensitive: Cabinet

3 PERSONNEL SECURITY

Explains personnel security cycle: recruit the right person—manage ongoing suitability—support secure separation

Clearer roles and responsibilities for getting and managing security clearances

4 PHYSICAL SECURITY

Improved integration between the PSPF and ASIO's technical advice